1. Claims 51 and 52 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by the patent to Nakamura (JP 08-096412) for the reasons of record. It is noted that these claims fail to recite the newly added heat insulating layer.

2. Claims 1-5, 7, 8, 10-16, 18, 19, 21, 22, 24, 25, 29, 30, 33-36 and 38-52 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the patent to Nakamura in view of the patent to Ariyoshi et al. (USP 6,524,766; see column 2, lines 50-52).

Nakamura teaches an optical information recording medium which comprises a temperature responsive layer 11 whose transmittance changes with a change in temperature caused by the irradiation of a light beam (see paragraph [0011]) and a layer of GeSbTe (see paragraph ([0020])). Ariyoshi et al. teach the advantages of employing a heat insulating layer next to the substrates of optical information recording media in order to prevent heat damage to the substrates. Use of the Ariyoshi et al. heat insulating layer for its concomitant function in the Nakamura optical information recording medium would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in this art in the absence of unexpected results. Since the optical information recording medium of Nakamura as modified by Ariyoshi et al. employs the same materials as those claimed by applicants, it is inherent that that the modified Nakamura optical information recording medium functions in the manner claimed by applicants.

3. Claims 1-5, 10-16, 18, 21, 22, 24, 25, 29, 30, 33-36 and 38-49 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the patent to Cheong in view of the patent to Ariyoshi et al. (USP 6,524,766; see column 2, lines 50-52).

Cheong teaches an optical information recording medium which can comprise a layer of thermosensitive material (see paragraph 5, lines 14-28) or ZnO (see column 6, line 9) and a light absorption layer. Ariyoshi et al. teach the advantages of employing a heat insulating layer next to the substrates of optical information recording media in order to prevent heat damage to the substrates. Use of the Ariyoshi et al. heat insulating layer for its concomitant function in the Cheong optical information recording medium would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in this art in the absence of unexpected results. Since the optical information recording medium of Cheong as modified by Ariyoshi et al. employs the same materials as those claimed by applicants, it is inherent that the modified Cheong optical information recording medium functions in the manner claimed by applicants.

4. Claim 37 is allowed.
